

Nick Carrillo

Chief Executive Officer

Western Wall & Ceiling Contractors Association

Orange, California

Nick Carrillo is Chief Executive Officer of the Western Wall & Ceiling Contractors Association (WWCCA), representing union-signatory wall and ceiling contractors across the western United States. He previously served as Vice President, working with contractors and labor partners on collective bargaining, education, and industry advancement.

A second-generation plasterer, Nick began his career “on the wall” in New Mexico before leaving home to grow his career. He has since lived and worked across the Southwest, progressing from traveling foreman to building material sales and technical education, and eventually association leadership. As Vice President of the West for a national association of signatory contractors, Nick represented contractors and specific trades across the U.S. and Canada.

Nick has authored industry articles and a foundational white paper that helped establish a national contractor certification program. He has managed programming for a global peer-reviewed research conference, served on national industry committees, and founded an emerging leaders program.

From the jobsite to association leadership, Nick’s career has centered on bringing people together, challenging the status quo, and moving the industry forward.
