

Brent McDonald

Senior Vice President and Chief Strategy Officer
Vanderbilt University Medical Center,
Office of Population Health
Nashville, Tennessee

As senior vice president and chief strategy officer for the Vanderbilt Office of Population Health, Brent McDonald brings a strategic vision to help employers achieve their population goals through partnering with Vanderbilt University Medical Center (VUMC). Brent joined VUMC in 2011 as the vice president for regional development and lead advisory services for the Vanderbilt Health Affiliated Network (VHAN). He helped design and build VHAN into one of the nation's largest clinically integrated networks of hospitals and physicians. Brent has 25 years of experience as a health care strategist with a vision for how to meet the market's rapidly changing needs and expectations. Prior to joining Vanderbilt, he worked with North Highland Consulting and PricewaterhouseCoopers' Healthcare Advisory group, where he developed a national revenue cycle strategy. Brent's subject matter expertise includes creating, launching and adopting successful value-based care models and innovative health delivery systems.