Senior Training and Technical Assistance Specialist
Futures Without Violence
Washington, D.C.

Suzannah Rogan has almost a decade of experience focused on prevention work. Currently, she serves on the National Organization for Victim Assistance's Board of Directors, and she is the senior training and technical assistance specialist on the Workplace and Economic Justice team at Futures Without Violence. Previously, while working at Doane University, she built the Campus Advocacy, Prevention, and Education (CAPE) Project and supported the development of a new Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion division. She also worked as a prevention coordinator for the Columbia University Sexual Violence Response team. In 2020, she earned a certificate in Leadership Strategy for Violence & Abuse Prevention from the University of Pennsylvania's Ortner Center on Violence & Abuse. She earned her master of science degree in gender, media, and culture from the London School of Economics and Political Science in 2016, focusing on the use of violence in masculinity construction and identity formation. She has a background in content and curriculum development, leadership and team development, project and budget management, community engagement and organizing, needs assessment and strategic planning, and utilizing anti-oppressive frameworks and theories of change to create sustainable, culturally responsive impact.
