Partner

Archer, Byington, Glennon & Levine LLP
Melville, New York

James W. Versocki is a partner with Archer, Byington, Glennon & Levine LLP. Since joining the firm, he has actively guided unions, Taft-Hartley funds and joint apprenticeship training committees through government investigations and advised them on recent developments in New York State and federal labor laws. Immediately prior to joining Archer, Byington, Glennon & Levine LLP, Versocki was in private practice handling complex internal investigations, white-collar criminal defense matters and litigation matters for clients before New York State and federal courts. He also guided clients through regulatory investigations by the New York State and United States Department of Labor, the United States Department of Justice and numerous New York State District Attorney offices. Versocki also handled matters for clients before administrative boards including the New York City Office of Administrative Trials and Hearings and matters involving New York City's Procurement Policy Board rules and regulations. Prior to entering private practice, Versocki was an assistant attorney general for the state of New York in the Attorney General's Labor Bureau. While at the Attorney General's office, his practice focused on the enforcement of a wide range of labor and employment laws, including the handling of numerous complex civil and criminal white-collar prosecutions involving the construction industry. Versocki's experience allowed him to assist in the drafting of proposed legislation and to provide guidance to Department of Labor investigators in prevailing wage and wage-and-hour enforcement matters. He was also responsible for handling groundbreaking labor-related litigation matters throughout New York State and federal courts on behalf of workers. Versocki worked closely with a wide variety of unions, law enforcement agencies and community groups. For his exemplary performance, he was awarded the attorney general's highest award for prosecutors. He has served as a member of the International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans Professionals Committee. Versocki is also an elected trustee for the Village of Sea Cliff; he took office in April, 2021.
